

DOCJT's "Kentucky Law Enforcement" Magazine Captures National Award While Magazine Staffers Win Individual Honors

In a national competition with Federal and state communications professionals, DOCJT's "Kentucky Law Enforcement" magazine captured best-in-the-nation recognition and four magazine staffers took home top awards.

The 2013 National Association of Government Communicators' "Blue Pencil and Gold Screen Awards" announced the winners at its national conference in Washington in April.

Judges' comments ranged from "Great design, great photography, excellent typography" to "articles well-written and engaging" and "graphics were exceptional and complimented the articles greatly."

In addition to the magazine's overall recognition, four members of the communications office were individually recognized:

- ☐ Kelly Foreman, first place nationally for writer's portfolio.
- ☐ Jim Robertson, first place nationally for photographer's portfolio
- ☐ Trang Baseheart, second place nationally for design
- ☐ Abbie Darst, third place nationally for writer's portfolio

Other winners included the U.S. Department of Labor, U.S. Department of Energy, National Science Foundation, U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs and the National Park Service.
